Eating Well

If you've ever been up half the night with an upset stomach or had that ache-all-over-feeling, maybe you've picked up "the flue bug", or it could be that you're suffering from a mild form of food poisoning.

Preventing food poisoning should start when you buy food at the supermarket and continue as you store, cook, and serve the food. The job of preventing food poisoning isn't hard if you follow three simple rules: keep food clean, keep food hot, keep food cold.

Keep food clean. You can keep germs off meat, poultry and dairy products by washing your hands thoroughly before handling the food; and by using utensils instead of hands whenever possible. Do not handle food when you have open cuts and sores, because the germs from the cuts may get into the food. If you cut a raw meat on a cutting board, make sure that you clean it thoroughly before using the board again. Don't cut uncooked meats and than use the same knife to cut other foods: germs can spread from one food to another.

Keep food hot. We know that most germs that cause food poisoning are killed when boiled, broiled or roasted. Once food is cooked, keep it hot until it is served. If you want to cook foods and then keep them for later use, don't allow them to stand around, but refrigerate them immediately. Remember that food left at room temperature for more than two hours allows germs to grow, and that these seldom change the taste, odor or looks of food.

In order to prevent contamination when preparing poultry products, stuff the bird just before cooking rather than a day or two ahead. When storing left-overs, remove the stuffing and place it in a separate dish; then remove the meat from the bone immediately and place both in the refrigerator.

Keep foods cold. Germs can't multiply fast if the storage temperature is 40°F or below. Therefore, when you go to the grocery store always pick up meat, poultry and dairy products last and then get them home and into your refrigerator or freezer quickly. If these foods get warm you may have problems from both food poisoning and spoilage, so make the grocery store the last stop before going home, and never leave the groceries in a hot car.

There are several ways to thaw frozen foods. The best way is to put the wrapped food in the refrigerator and allow it to thaw completely. However, this takes time; so if you are in a hurry, put the food in a water-tight package and run cool water over it.

Mixtures of foods that require a lot of handling may need special attention. For example when preparing a chicken salad, you can freeze the cubes of chicken and mix them in the salad while they are still frozen; this will also help to keep the salad cold. Both broth and gravey are especially subject to spoilage, so be sure to cool leftovers quickly in the refrigerator. When you reheat either, boil for several minutes before serving.

Very often the odor of a food or appearance may indicate that something is wrong; however, most of the time it is difficult to know when food has "gone bad". There are two good rules to follow when working with foods: Never taste any food that doesn't seem right; and if in doubt, throw it out.

Campbell County Fair Scheduled

The Campbell County Fair has been scheduled for September 30 - October 1, 1977, at the Yellow Branch Elementary School and the Campbell County Vo-Tech Center located on U. S. Highway 29 South. A wide range of events and exhibits has been planned by the Fair Committee to make this years Fair bigger and better than ever.

Exhibits by both individuals and groups will be featured. Individuals may enter areas such as agriculture, home economics, hobbies, and arts and crafts. Both youth and adult divisions are offered in many classes.

Added this year will be the special animal events for children: a dog show and a pet show. The dog show includes showmanship, confirmation, obedience, and seven novelty classes including best behaved, largest, smallest, funniest, etc. The pet show features seven class including best behaved, funniest, best costumed, best looking, etc. Animals are to be registered and shown on Saturday, October 1, 1977.

There will also be animal exhibits which will not be judged. Anyone having unusual animals to exhibit should contact Ronald Reynolds, Chm. of this event.

Another added attraction will be a Youth Tractor Driving Contest which will be held October 1. This contest is designed to give youth an opportunity to demonstrate knowledge of tractor maintenance and skill in operation and to compete with other youth. Contestants must be under the age of 19 on the day of the contest.

Group events such as old fashioned food and fund raising, industrial exhibits, educational exhibits, and square dancing have been planned. The food and fund raising enables groups to take an active part in the Fair and make money for their group. Ten (10) percent of the money taken in will be contributed to the Bicentennial Fund for future events. Application for a booth must be in by September 16, 1977.

Any County business or industry may exhibit or have a display promoting their product, service or profession. Also, any local club or organization may have a display promoting that club or organization.

Any organization or individual is invited to demonstrate and/or sell any phase of folk art, such as molasses making, cider making, basket weaving, rug making, wood carving, pottery making, etc. Ten (10) percent of the net profit of sales will be contributed to the Bicentennial Fund for future events.

An added attraction this year will be Bingo under the auspices of the Concord Ruritan Club.

Fair catalogues have been placed around the County. For further information contact:

Parents Often Blamed But Seldom Trained

Teaching parents ways to raise responsible children will be the theme of a half-day Parent-Child Seminar conducted by the Mental Health Association of Roanoke Valley (MHARV) in September.

The workshop, open to the public, will be Sept. 27, 1977, 9 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. at the Salem-Roanoke Valley Civic Center.

Dr. Thomas Gordon of Solana Beach, Calif., will speak on: "How Effective is Your Parenting?"

He also will speak at the Annual MHARV Dinner meeting open to members and the public, at the Salem-Roanoke Valley Civic Center on Sept. 26. Reservations are necessary by Sept. 20. The cost will be $6.75 per person.

Dr. Gordon is the author/creator of "P.E.T.: Parent Effectiveness Training," which describes a new approach to the world's hardest job - parenthood. He has written two other books, "T.E.T.: Teacher Effectiveness Training" and "P.E.T. in Action."

According to Dr. Gordon, a licensed clinical psychologist, parents are often blamed but seldom trained. P.E.T. has been called revolutionary because it shows parents why they should be neighter strict nor permissive. It is what Dr. Gordon calls a "no-lose" system for resolving day-to-day conflicts between parents and their youngsters. Touch, strict, authoritarian parents cause their children to rebel and retaliate. Soft, lenient, permissive parents allow their children to become inconsiderate, selfish and unmanageable. With strictness, the offspring always loses. With permissiveness, the parent always loses. P.E.T. is based on the idea that neither side should lose.

It teaches skills and disciplinary methods to help parents resolve conflicts so that both parent and child feel satisfied and both are willing to carry out the agreements reached. It also teaches the importance of openness, honesty, and response to needs - those of both parent and child.

The Sept. 27th seminar is one of a series designed by the Mental Health Association of Roanoke Valley, in an effort to improve parent-child relationships. A MHARV spokesman emphasized that this is not a course, but rather an introduction to P.E.T. techniques. P.E.T. is one of several models of parenting and is not considered to be the final answer for everyone.

If sufficient interest is shown, MHARV will sponsor an in-depth workshop at a later date. There will be local P.E.T. instructors available at the seminar to answer questions and a table with information about P.E.T. courses in the area. Founded in 1962, in California, the program has spread to all 50 states and several foreign countries. To date, over a quarter of a million parents have taken the course. The New York Times called P.E.T. "a national movement."

To preregister or obtain information, call or write MHARV (703) 344-9831, 201 Carlton Terrace Bldg., 920 S. Jefferson St., Roanoke, Va. 24016 Reservations are limited and all will be taken on a first-come first-serve basis.
